Star of the HBO max reality TV show
LOVE OFF THE GRID

Arune Savage, a Lithuanian-born artist raised in South Africa and now living off the grid in Missouri's Ozarks, has a knack for turning life's chaos into art. Her memoir, Lost My Mind Here Somewhere, is a no-holds-barred account of her immigration journey that tore apart her fantasy of the American Dream and shoved her headfirst into adulthood—usually with a shovel. She's the brains behind the Uneven Lanes comedy show and starred in HBO Max's Love Off the Grid, where she proves that living without running water or flush toilets is the ultimate form of rebellion. These days, she's building an intentional community of modern-day hippies who prefer dirt floors and open skies over city lights, all while contemplating the absurdity of it all.

In Lost My Mind Here Somewhere, join a fiercely resilient woman as she navigates the tumultuous waters of immigration from South Africa to the United States, armed with nothing but an oversized suitcase and delusional ideas about the American dream. With razor-sharp storytelling and tragic humor, this memoir reveals the messy transformation from a naive girl to a woman who embraces her defects amidst the chaos of what she once thought was the 'Land of Plenty'. This is a tale of survival through a fruitless search for one's sanity and the unexpected laughter that stitches together the fabric of our deepest struggles, proving that even in the darkest moments, there's a punchline waiting to be found.

UNEVEN LANES

*Voted #1 stupidest self-published duo, Uncle Alex and Arune Savage. These b*tches d*n't give an apple-pen or a cup full of sh*t that someone else eats, definitely not that...*
